KUALA LAMPUR - The Formative Years KHOO KAY KIM KUALA LAMPUR is fast becoming a city with an international look. Although pictures of early Kuala Lumpur have been published from time to time, little is known of the problems which confronted the local authority during the city's formative year. The Kuala Lumpur Sanitary Board, founded in 1890, was the first of its kind in this country. Fortunately, much of its work was carefully documented in one form or another. These documents however are not easily accessible to the average person. Some of the more interesting sources have been assembled in this book for the benefit of those who wish to have a more graphic picture of Kuala Lumpur developed under The Sanitary Board. The book should also help the present and subsequent generations to identify some of Kuala Lumpur's historical landmarks. Features black and white photos from as far back as 1884.	$22.00
